What the blazes is going on now? I just got a phone call from an "independent" survey company that wants to know how I'm voting in the election!

I told the woman that it's my business and the local has a set of b---s asking this question. She told me that it was an independent company with no names; in other words, they wouldn't know who the member was that was answering the survey questions. The conversation went something like this from that point:

woman: ok

me: you called this number which you got from the union, right?

woman: yes, but no name

me: well what does that mean to me?

woman: that it's an anonymous survey

me: oh I see. So the union will know that the member at this number was going to vote a certain way, but they don't know the name of the member, even though I'm the only member at this number?

woman: well sir (I cut her off)

me: I don't trust this low down tactic. The Union must think all members have no brain in their heads, no thanks!

Roger is really worried.
